Protest for Rehtaeh urges real change

Responsibility.

Demonstrators say parents, police and educators have role to play in ensuring teen tragedy isn't repeated

Local residents and members of an international hacktivist group called for both criminal justice and social change during a protest Sunday in honour of a Cole Harbour teen who took her own life.

"There's a responsibility by the public in the way kids are brought up and what they're taught in the home," said a masked, unnamed member of Anonymous, referring to the four boys who allegedly gang-raped Rehtaeh Parsons when she was 15. "But there's also a responsibility by the judicial system to act when there's a problem and do a thorough investigation, which is not what happened here."

Parsons killed herself earlier this month, two years after she was allegedly raped and then harassed by classmates about the incident.

RCMP did not initially lay charges but have said they'll re-

Later on Sunday, an apparent counter-protest materialized at the same location. A handful of people stood on the sidewalk carrying signs reading "Listen!" and "2 sides to every story," apparently in support of the boys involved in the alleged assault.

open the investigation, based on new information.

About 100 people joined the peaceful protest outside HRP headquarters Sunday, castigating police for their efforts.

"We urge the RCMP to act like guardians and set the proper example for the young men of Nova Scotia, and to send a very clear message that this behaviour will not be tolerated," said a protester named Dave.

Kim Wall, 45, said it's time for adults to start teaching young boys and men responsibility for their own behaviour.

"I'm really tired of phrases like, 'Boys will be boys,'" she said. "It is time that we start teaching our sons respect so that we're not all teaching our daughters to protect themselves against those sons."

Grieving dad trying to 'right wrongs' against women

Rehtaeh Parsons.

Handful of people show up to honour teen at vigil in Toronto

JESSICA SMITH
Metro in Toronto

For a grieving father, coming to a small candlelight vigil for Rehtaeh Parsons was his way of trying to "right a wrong."

David Wilson was one of a few participants in a small vigil at Dundas Square in Toronto on Sunday night for Parsons, the Cole Harbour teen who killed herself after a photo of her alleged rape was circulated online.

Wilson's daughter Lindsay Wilson was stalked and killed by her ex-boyfriend on April 5 in Bracebridge, Ont.

"He warned her he had a gun," Wilson said. "He had stalked her previously."

His daughter's ex-boyfriend shot her in her driveway, then shot himself. "Nothing but a complete coward," Wilson said.

He said he's calling on police to intervene in domestic violence situations before threats become violence, and more women are killed.

"If that had been the case with my daughter, she would have been here today," he said. "She was told by police a restraining order would do nothing whatsoever and (her ex-boyfriend) could still do anything he wanted to her. And as it turned out, he did."

Wilson said in the wake of his daughter's death he has learned more about the extent of violence against women and today is only the first day of a life of advocacy to stop it.

"This is the only way I know of constructively righting a wrong," he said. "I'm primarily here to support Rehtaeh Parsons' parents. It's the worst thing that could ever happen."

A need to speak up

'It's happening too much'

The organizer of Sunday's vigil in Toronto says the story of Rehtaeh Parsons' alleged rape hits close to home.

"I have friends this has happened to. This has happened to me. It's happening too much," she said.

"We're hear for Rehtaeh. We felt that with a story that's really taken the country, the biggest city really needs to speak up and say something."

Celebrate Rehtaeh's life, priest urges at funeral

Family and friends of Rehtaeh Parsons were urged at her funeral on Saturday to celebrate her life, but also to use her story to draw attention to larger problems in society.

More than 100 people filed into St. Mark's Anglican Church in Halifax's north end to say goodbye to Parsons.

In his eulogy, Rev. John Morrell noted that social media contributed to Rehtaeh's depression and death, but said it also allowed her family to share her story around the world.

"It is a time of celebration and thanksgiving of her short life amongst us," Morrell said in the eulogy. "However, given the worldwide attention to the events leading up to this tragedy, it is appropriate to focus on what happens tomorrow, and the day after and weeks and years to come."

After the service, pallbearers in dark suits carried an urn encased in a glass box down the church steps and into a hearse

Parsons case reopened

Police ask for public help in investigation

In the light of "new and credible information," Halifax police are reopening the Rehtaeh Parsons investigation.

An investigative team made up of Halifax Regional Police and RCMP has been assigned to review the new information, RCMP Cpl. Scott MacRae said on Friday.

"We have information that we can verify, we can substantiate, we can work with and there's something real that the police can actually look into," MacRae said.

"Where we'll go, that's a whole other story."

MacRae emphasized the information did not come from an online source.

The hacker group Anonymous has said it has identified the four boys involved in the alleged attack, but MacRae said he didn't think it was connected to the new information.

MacRae also repeated the Parsons family's request for privacy during this time.

Anyone with specific information about the case is asked to call police or Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-8477.

Hearings on HRWC water rate hike set to begin this week

The head of a local business group is urging the provincial regulator to take a measured approach to the Halifax Regional Water Commission's (HRWC) rate hike application.

Hearings begin at the Utility and Review Board on Monday into the HRWC's proposed increases for water, wastewater and stormwater fees.

"(The UARB) have to balance the need for money for infrastructure repair along with the economic impacts," said Luc Erjavec, Atlantic vice-president of the Canadian Restaurant and Foodservices Association.

"I think we have to look at what does the community as a whole need, in terms of rate payers, business owners and the water commission."

The increase for an average residential user will be

Justification

"This is infrastructure that people don't see ... where you don't see it, you don't really think about it, until it doesn't work."

HRWC spokesman James Campbell

11.2 per cent on July 1, 2013, and 16.7 per cent in 2014.

HRWC spokesperson James Campbell said the commission needs $2.6 billion over the next 30 years to upgrade and expand crumbling infrastructure. He said HRM's rates are among the lowest in the country, and the commission isn't asking for more than is necessary.

"Do we continue to pass on the legacy of failing infrastructure to our kids and grandkids, or do we step up to the plate now and pay for the infrastructure we're getting the benefit from?" he said. "It's our assertion that we're the ones who are using it now, we should be the ones who pay for it."

Erjavec said the increases for commercial users are too steep to bear, estimating they'll cost the average restaurant owner an extra $5,000 a year.

He suggested the HRWC should focus more on conservation education, which would reduce the load on the aging system.

"If we could all reduce it a little bit, maybe the city could get by with a smaller pipe instead of a bigger pipe," he said.

A witness to the stabbing — which happened in front of Jennifers of Nova Scotia — called the incident "crazy."

The male suspect, 38, fled the area, and the victim was rushed to hospital by a concerned citizen.

Police had taped off the corner of Jennifers of Nova Scotia as they investigated Saturday night.

Staff Sgt. Bill Morris said on Sunday the victim and suspect are known to each other. He wouldn't say if they were known to police. He also wouldn't give an update on the victim's condition.

Police are still searching for the suspect, who is wanted on charges of attempted murder and various weapons offences.

Liberals have their saviour

Leadership race.

Justin Trudeau seizes victory, but now must deliver on the hype

Justin Trudeau will walk into the House of Commons on Monday as the new leader of the Liberal party — with expectations for him flying as high as his decisive victory in the leadership race.

Trudeau handily won the job that his late father, Pierre Trudeau, held for 16 years in the 20th century. His victory, then, is already historic: a rare family dynasty in the making in Canadian politics.

But the task now facing Trudeau is the more pressing question about the future: whether he can rebuild the Liberals from their third-place standing back to the powerful political force they once were in Canada.

Before about 1,000 cheering Liberals gathered in Ottawa on Sunday night, Trudeau said that task shouldn't be underestimated.

"Let us be clear-eyed about what we have accomplished. We have worked hard and we have had a great campaign. We are united, hopeful and resolute in our purpose," he said. "But know this: We have won nothing more and nothing less than the opportunity to work even harder."

Trudeau conducted a leadership campaign that attracted nearly viral levels of public attention and crowds of adoring fans: 10,000 volunteers alone and thousands of new party supporters signed up in the past six months.

He served notice that he intends to campaign as Liberal leader in the same way as he campaigned for the job: with optimism rather than negativity, and beyond the nasty, personal partisanship that prevails in Ottawa.

er afterward. His campaign advisers said he intends to spend the next few weeks putting a transition plan in place.

Trudeau said he's ready for the Conservatives' now-familiar brand of attack ads on Liberal leaders.

"The Conservative Party will now do what it does. It will try to spread fear. It will sow cynicism. It will attempt to convince Canadians that we should be satisfied with what we have now," Trudeau said in his acceptance speech.

The New Democrats, keen to keep the Liberals down in third place, will also have Trudeau in their sights as they present themselves as the main progressive opposition to the Conservatives.

Vote count

Landslide victory

Justin Trudeau is the Liberals' undisputed star, sweeping more than 80 per cent of the available points in a final field of six candidates.

Liberal MP Joyce Murray, whose leadership platform included co-operating with New Democrats and Greens to unseat Harper in the next election, finished a very distant second behind Trudeau with 10 per cent of the vote.

Just the prospect of the fluidly bilingual Montreal MP's victory had already boosted the Liberals back into contention in public-opinion surveys. They are now running even with or ahead of the ruling Conservatives.

The Conservative party immediately put out a release congratulating Trudeau on his leadership win and then slamming his inexperience.

Canada's polar-bear trade likely aids poachers: Russia

Canada is the only country in the world that allows sport hunting of polar bears. ELISHA DACEY/METRO FILE

Russian officials are becoming increasingly concerned about polar-bear poachers in their country using Canadian documents to disguise illegally hunted pelts.

"I think it is a real problem," said Nikita Ovsyanikov, one of Russia's top polar-bear scientists and a member of the Polar Bear Specialist Group, the leading international research consortium on the animals.

Ovsyanikov claims that Canadian documents required to bring hides into the country are being pulled off shipments and sold separately. The certificates are then applied to skins from Russian bears to make them appear as if they have been legally hunted and imported.

Canada is the only country in the world that allows sport hunting of polar bears, which makes it the only country to issue certificates under the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES) that allow polar-bear products to cross borders.

"I'm aware of two cases where not pelts but certificates were offered for sale on the In-

Demand

- Such pelts are increasingly popular among Russia's elite. Canadian auction houses have said they can't meet demand for the hides, most of which go to Russia.

ternet," Ovsyanikov in an interview with The Canadian Press from Moscow. "The price was $1,000, so it was quite a profitable business."

Russian officials, supported by the International Fund for Animal Welfare, used concerns over the Canadian documents to argue that all trade in polar-bear parts should be banned at the recent CITES meeting in Bangkok.

Environment Canada said it has been monitoring the allegations but has no knowledge of its documents being misused.

Two other measures will be extended by one year: Gun owners who let their possession-only licences expire will still be allowed to re-apply without having to pay to go through a safety course; as will an amnesty on criminal charges for failing to license or register non-restricted weapons for people "who were taking steps to comply."

Women getting poor HIV care: Study

British Columbian researchers have found that women with HIV-AIDS are more likely than men to receive sub-standard treatment.

women were 25 per cent more likely to get sub-optimal care.

Nearly half of the women in their first year of treatment hadn't been tested to see if they'd be resistant to the drugs, compared to 36 per cent of cases among men. The study also found that women were given drug regimens that were not recommended for their particular cases nearly twice as often as men. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Declining influence

Al-Shabab controls far less territory today and its influence appears to be on the decline.

- Al-Shabab ruled Mogadishu from 2006 until 2011, when African Union and Somali forces pushed them out of the city. Since then the al-Shabab extremists have launched suicide bombings on the capital city every few weeks.

A barrage of bullets and two car bomb blasts rattled Mogadishu on Sunday when nine al-Shabab Islamic extremists stormed Somalia's main court complex, officials said, in a two-hour attack that shows the country's most dangerous militant group may be down but not defeated.

A preliminary death toll stood at 16, including all nine attackers. Six of the attackers detonated suicide vests and three others were shot and killed during the assault.

The attack on the Supreme Court complex began at around 12:30 p.m., sparking running battles with police and army forces. One car bomb detonated outside the court. The militants took an unknown number of hostages during the siege. Many other government workers and civilians in the court complex hid while fearing for their lives. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Syria crisis. Activists say regime airstrikes kill 25, including 12 children

Syrian government warplanes carried out airstrikes on a rebellious neighbourhood in the capital and a village in the country's northeast on Sunday, killing at least 25 people, including a dozen children, activists said.

With its ground forces stretched thin, President Bashar Assad's regime has relied heavily on its fighter jets and helicopters to try to stem rebel advances in the country's civil war. The air raids frequently hit civilian areas, drawing criticism from the international community.

A Human Rights Watch report last week accused the Syrian government of committing war crimes by using indiscriminate and sometimes deliberate airstrikes against civilians, killing at least 4,300 people since the summer.

Copyright collective to battle universities

Whose lines are they anyway? Expert says legal action intended to 'scare' schools into re-licensing with agency

There's a battle brewing in Canadian academia.

On one side stands Access Copyright, a collective that has provided institutions access to a pool of protected intellectual work for more than two decades while distributing royalties to the writers, artists and publishers it represents.

On the other is a group of universities that no longer feel the need to pay for the services offered by the collective, opting instead to navigate the world of intellectual property rights without a middle agent.

Tensions are threatening to boil over as Access Copyright takes one of Canada's largest universities to court, a move some see as a warning to others who have ended relations with the agency.

Access Copyright is claiming Toronto's York University, which opted out of an agreement with the collective, has improperly been reproducing and authorizing the copying of protected works.

The issue goes beyond a single institution, though.

To combat unauthorized copying, Access Copyright has also filed two applications to the Copyright Board of Canada requesting tariffs that would require schools and universities that don't have an agreement with Access Copyright to pay to use works the agency handles the rights for.

Institutions wouldn't have to pay the tariff if they have direct licence agreements with publishers, use openly accessible work or copy a portion of a work small enough to be considered "fair dealing."

The entire situation could have wide-ranging implications for students and educational institutions across the country.

"At the end of the day, if Access Copyright is successful — although I have to say that based on where the law is at, that seems unlikely — we're talking about millions and millions of dollars being paid by taxpayers to this group," said Michael Geist, a University of Ottawa law professor who is an expert on intellectual property.

The deal at issue, effective until December 2015, requires institutions to pay $26 per full-time student annually — an increase from a previous rate of $3.38 per full-time student plus a 10 cents per page royalty for copying protected works.

Porter. Fewer hurdles expected for Toronto island airport's new jets

Porter Airlines' expansion plans may be headed for months of turbulence, but not the fierce opposition it faced a decade ago to change at the waterfront airport, a political observer says.

On Wednesday, the airline announced it had placed a conditional order for 12 Bombardier CS100 jets, with 18 options worth about $2.11 billion. The aircraft will allow it to fly to Los Angeles, Florida, Calgary and the Caribbean from Toronto.

The plan stirred vocal opposition from local political and community leaders. But University of Toronto assistant professor Zack Taylor said this time around, the success of the airline may blunt some of the outcry. "This airport is a lot less threatening to people than it used to be," said Taylor, whose focus is on local politics. He said people have become used to the service, except perhaps island residents and those in nearby condos.

He said other issues will likely dominate the next municipal election. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Tax-haven lists prompt disclosures

Wealthy Canadians with money stashed overseas have come forward in droves to confess after secret lists began circulating with the names of people apparently evading taxes in foreign banking havens.

The CRA has seen the number of disclosures rise dramatically since 2007, when it received a list from Liechtenstein naming 106 Canadians with accounts in secretive banks there. The agency in 2010 received another list from France with information about more than 1,000 Swiss accounts linked to Canadians.

Revenue Minister Gail Shea is pursuing yet another massive list, acquired recently by the CBC, that the broadcaster says has the names of 450 Canadians with money in foreign tax havens. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Phone use in the movies? There's an app for that

Future of film. New horror film's clever use of interactive elements is just the next step in enhancing viewer experience with smartphones

MICHELLE CASTILLO
Metro World News in New York

What movie actually wants you to whip out your phone while it's playing?

The new horror film App. Viewers download an app on their smartphones, which uses a digital audio cue — inaudible to human ears — that sends texts and other surprises tied to what's on screen. The film's producer hopes it will “transform cinema around the world.”

He's not alone. A survey by Nielsen in June 2012 revealed that 41 per cent of tablet users and 38 per cent of smartphone users fiddle with their devices while watching TV.

Studios believe if they can target the audience to their products, they can not only enhance the viewing experience but gain more viewers.

This isn't the first time we've seen the second screen experience.

U.S. channel AMC offers a Story Sync feature for some of their programs including The Walking Dead and Breaking Bad. Using their wireless devices, users can vote in polls, answer trivia questions and re-watch key moments.

The information updates in real time as the viewer is watching the episode. AMC-owned channel IFC also offers a similar IFC Sync for their program Portlandia.

“Portlandia fans are some of IFC's most engaged viewers and we're excited to give them an even more robust, immediate way to connect with the show and especially with Fred and Carrie,” Craig Parks, IFC's vice-president

Now, some companies are branching out into the gaming world.

The plot of the SyFy

Channel series Defiance, revolves around a world where humans and aliens live together after years of strife and conflict.

While the TV show explores characters and dramatic storylines, a directly tied first-person shooter video game will allow viewers to fully immerse themselves in the universe.

And Starz's Da Vinci's Demons will offer a video-game-like app called Citizens of Florence that will allow viewers to explore the history of Florence and the legacy of Leonardo da Vinci.

More content will be unlocked as the series progresses and more real people and inventions are introduced.

Almost 50 videos can be unlocked on the app through mini-game challenges throughout the first eight episode run.

Will and Jaden Smith, here in their film After Earth, will be Metro's guests in the Earth Day edition April 22. HANDOUT

Gettin' jiggy with Earth Day

Metro special guests. Will and Jaden Smith join Metro on April 22

Big news for Big Willie Style fans: Jaden Smith will join forces with his father, Will Smith, as special guests of Metro next Monday, April 22. The Smiths will riff off the theme of "the future," creating exclusive content for Metro in honour of Earth Day and the duo's action film After Earth. Their film is set on — yes — Earth, 1,000 years after humanity has fled, with Jaden on a mission to find help for his injured dad, battling animals and an alien.

As special guests, Jaden and Will Smith will imagine what the world will look like hundreds of years from now, when it comes to environmental impact, advances in technology and transport, and media. The pair will also sit for an exclusive Q&A with Metro.

'Inspired' Justin hopes Anne Frank was a 'belieber'

Justin Bieber visited the Anne Frank House in Amsterdam Saturday. According to the Facebook page for the museum, he wrote the following in the guestbook: "Truly inspiring to be able to come here. Anne was a great girl. Hopefully she would have been a believer." Of course Anne Frank would have totally been obsessed with you, Justin, if only she could have found the time in between trying to survive the Holocaust and all.

Tips from an Insider

Thinking of selling your old Gold and Silver? You Should, But Be Smart About It.

Over the past five years, the price of gold and silver has seen a dramatic increase. Over the past couple of years, you no doubt, have noticed an increase in the number of companies eagerly willing to take that old gold and silver off your hands for you.

My name is Matthew MacQuarrie. I am the President of Recycle Frog, and yes, we buy gold and silver. I began working with precious metals at the Royal Canadian Mint, and later went on to hold a Vice President position with one of the worlds largest refining groups. If you're considering selling gold and silver, whether you decide to deal with us, or not, consider the following tips. They may just be worth their weight in... nah, I won't go there.

Deal Locally: Local companies depend greatly on word of mouth advertising and are much more likely to treat you fairly. A company that simply travels city to city will often take advantage of potential customers whenever possible. The reason is simple, typically buyers are paid on commission, (so the lower your payout, the higher their payout). And why not, its not like they're ever going to see you again. Harsh but true.

Don't Let the Material Out of Your Sight: Many gold buyers will lure you to their location and ask you to wait while one of their "experts out back" determines the value of your material. Negotiations then take place while your material is no where to be seen. This approach is often accompanied with the "hard sell". In the worst cases, customers have even reported missing items after material is returned. Avoid putting yourself in this position.

Guaranteed Highest Payouts!!! v.s. Being Treated Fairly: Remember what your mother told you, "If it sounds too good to be true..": Most of the advertising our industry uses is aimed at the greedy sidein all of us. Everybody wants the most money, but the fact is, no one in this business is doing it for free. In my experience, the companies boasting the loudest about their payouts are usually the ones paying the least, regardless of their "posted rates" or "highest price guarantees". So be realistic, and deal with a company that has a good reputation.

There is no question, selling gold and silver at current prices, just makes sense. And, our industry is like any industry, there are good companies and there are bad companies. Recycle Frog has always prided itself on providing consumers with relevant information and treating its customers fairly.

Travel tidbit

Power down?

IT'S ALL RELATIVE
Kathy Buckworth,
kathybuckworth.com

A tablet or large screen smartphone is an amazing entertainment and distraction tool when travelling with children, particularly on crowded airplanes, where the "parenting in public" challenges are magnified due to the enclosed space and normally short tempers of the surrounding travellers.

Most planes and some airports still don't have WiFi, so take the time to download games before you leave.

It's also important to remember that all electronics have to be powered down prior to take off and landing, and in some cases this can be half an hour or more. Thirty minutes in "toddler time" is a long time. Don't rely entirely on electronic diversions for the kids, or yourselves.

Take age appropriate reading materials, activities and toys to fill the time. Snacks are a great distraction also, and as there can be unexpected delays, relying on buying food for a hungry little mouth while on board can be risky. Finger foods such as cereal, dried fruit and cut up vegetables can provide tactile and nutritious ways to pass the time.

One final thought: allowing your child to pass the time by practising their soccer kicks on the seat in front of them is not an option. KATHY BUCKWORTH IS AN AWARD WINNING WRITER. VISIT KATHYBUCKWORTH.COM OR FOLLOW KATHY ON TWITTER @KATHYBUCKWORTH.

Julia Sweeney goes from It's Pat to adventures in motherhood

New book. The former SNL star shares her insight into being a mom to an adopted child in If It's Not One Thing, It's Your Mother

JANE BORDEN
Metro World News in New York

Julia Sweeney titled her new memoir after a pillow embroidered with If It's Not One Thing, It's Your Mother, given to her by her mom that she hated until she had a daughter — who now dislikes the pillow herself.

The former Saturday Night Live (It's Pat!) and Broadway (God Said 'Ha!') star writes about her long path to a nontraditional family with insight and warmth.

Also, refreshingly candid humour: She received her adopted child, Mulan, in China, from a man who entered a crowded ballroom holding the baby aloft in the air, while a muzak version of Celine Dion's My Heart Will Go On played from a boom box.

That must've been an overwhelming and complicated moment. Did you even register the humour of it at the time?

Yes! I was so fixated on it that I missed some of the emotional moment. And that, I would say, is something I do.

You write about investigating your genealogy. How has adopting a child affected your thoughts about it?

I've been in conferences about it and they say, "In this room of 300 people, if you go back five generations, you'll have one person in common with all of you." You're related to everyone. It's terribly meaningful. And also completely meaningless. When I adopted Mulan, I felt like I had to not care about my family history. But then I realized I do care.

I just took my niece and nephew to the cemetery and said, "This is your great grandfather." Mulan added, "And my great grandfather." I replied, "Yes!" But then I thought, "Is it?" It's a grey area.

How does Mulan feel about being in your book?

Right now she likes it, but if we butt heads, she'll say, "And I will resent you for the rest of my days because you wrote that book."

Because of the book, does Mulan like the pillow more?

No! She still hates it. And I just looked at it and thought, I should put it in the next bag to Goodwill. Then I remembered, "Oh no, but it's the pillow! I've infused it with all this meaning now. I guess I have to keep it."

New research

Kids say the darndest things

Children learn to swear before they have mastered the alphabet, according to research from scientists in California.

But they are only following the example of adults, said Dr. Melissa Mohr of the University of Stanford.

English language speakers use a swear word for every 140 words they speak — or 0.7 per cent of the time — her research found. And that's why most children know a profanity by the age of one or two. Although, said Dr. Mohr, the level of juvenile swearing really takes off at the age of three and four.

Her book, *Holy Sh*t: A Brief History of Swearing*, says the upper classes are just as likely to swear as anyone else, although those identifying as middle class are less likely to.

Make it a lamb tagine night

Ingredients

- 2 tbsp olive oil
- 1 large yellow onion, diced
- 1 head garlic, minced
- 2 lbs lamb leg or stew meat, trimmed of fat and cut into 1-inch pieces
- 2 tbsp chopped rosemary
- 15-oz can chopped or diced

tomatoes

- 15-oz can chickpeas, drained
- 3/4 cup chicken broth
- Salt and ground black pepper
- 1 lemon, cut into wedges
- Chopped fresh parsley, to garnish
- Plain Greek yogurt, to serve

1. In the base of a tagine or large Dutch oven over medium-high, heat the oil. Add the onion and garlic, then sauté until tender and lightly browned, about 2 to 3 minutes. Add the lamb and brown on all sides, about 15 minutes.

2. Stir in the rosemary, tomatoes, chickpeas and broth, then bring to a simmer. Cover, reduce heat to maintain a bare simmer and let cook for 2 hours, or until the lamb is fork tender.

3. Season with salt and pepper, then divide between serving plates. Squeeze 1 or 2 lemon wedges over each serving, then top with parsley and a dollop of yogurt.

Skills that will set you up for success in any setting

You want 'em? I got 'em! Today's top transferable talents every employee should perfect

VAN BUUREN
CareerBear.com

Chances are, you'll make between five and eight career changes before you retire — and according to Stefan Danis, CEO of Mandrake and NEXCareer, it will be your transferable skills that will net you the next job.

"In fact," says Danis, "unless you work in a highly specialized area, having these generic skills may be the difference between getting a job or promotion, or not."

Simply put, transferable skills are the versatile skills — sometimes thought of as "soft skills" — that will serve you well in many different roles. You learned these skills at school, through social interactions, playing sports and just plain living. Here are the transferable skills Danis looks for:

Emotional intelligence

EI is the ability to relate to people. It includes skills such as empathy, participation, collaboration, communication and negotiation. Being able to perceive, control and evaluate emotions is important in certain job functions. "I think EI and interpersonal skills are increasingly a focus in school because today the workplace is more about teamwork than ever before."

Bust out your boss moves

"Since more than one quarter of employees don't perform well managing others, employers are looking for leadership skills when they are promoting from within."

Stefan Danis
CEO of Mandrake and NEXCareer

Resiliency quotient

You don't control many workplace changes, but you do control how you respond to these changes. "The change gets communicated and then there's that time delay between the communication and your buy-in ... how much time that takes is determined by how resilient you are," says Danis. People with a high resiliency quotient are flexible, adaptable and can multi-task. "Unfortunately, many people are change-adverse. They don't react well and get stuck when their jobs or agenda change. They can emote toxicity that employers want to avoid."

Leadership skills

Although teamwork is the corporate play of choice these days, someone needs to be accountable for getting a project done, says Danis. "Having leadership skills means you have the ability to engage individuals and lead projects." It also means you are industrious and a self-starter, and have initiative. "Since more than one quarter of employees don't perform well managing others, employers are looking for leadership skills when they are promoting from within. In order to lead effectively, you need willing followers."

Analytical skills

This is your willingness to look at the details of a situation from all angles and put together a response to what you see. "Rather than get overwhelmed or miss patterns of what's in front of them, someone with strong analytical skills can make sense of what appears complex. There may be numerous approaches and usually there is one better answer for an organization. If you have strong analytical skills you'll get to that answer quickly," Danis says.

Multicultural sensitivity

"Canadian workforces are increasingly multicultural — in Toronto, 54 per cent of the population is a visible minority — so someone who has what I call 'multicultural sensitivity' is a huge corporate asset." Comparable to the need for gender awareness in the workplace 10 or 20 years ago, having no cultural barriers in the way you think is highly prized, particularly if you're working in an area that involves customer service, sales and human resources, says Danis. "It's about having a more holistic perspective about different points of view, and empathy about how one thinks culturally."

Being organized

Being organized is important because life is so complex with so many distractions. "You're able to get organized, implement, allocate the time to the right areas, pick a completion date, and deconstruct a project with key milestones and intervals," says Danis. These skills include project management and time management capabilities, and understanding what comes first.

Precautions. Your home is a valuable asset

With spring underway, it's a time when many Canadians start looking for a new home or thinking about renovations. Either way, it's an ideal time to start thinking about home insurance.

"Your home is your most valuable asset. With severe weather on the rise, it is more critical than ever to ensure that your home is properly protected," says Ralph Palumbo, vice-president, Ontario, Insurance Bureau of Canada (IBC). "If your home is ever damaged or destroyed, it's very important that it is insured to its accurate replacement value. Taking a few insurance precautions now can help get you through a very hectic time if you do need to make a claim."

The IBC recommends:

- Whenever you increase the value of your home through renovations or new content purchases (such as artwork, jewelry), notify your insurance professional as soon as possible to ensure you have adequate coverage.

- Know your policy renewal date and allow yourself at least 60 days to review your coverage with your insurance professional.

- Make a list of key details about your home and contents as that information may be needed when calculating the amount of insurance you need.

- If you are in the process of moving and packing up your possessions, it's an ideal time to do a home inventory. This may help you determine the right amount coverage you need. Take pictures or video your possessions since that information can be helpful in the event of a claim.

- Read your policy carefully. Ask questions. Have your insurance representative explain certain exclusions on your policy. Know what isn't covered.

- In the event you have a claim, know the amount of your policy deductible. Talk to your insurance representative about any deductible adjustments and the impact it can have on your policy.

- Shopping for insurance of any kind is always recommended. It's important to compare prices and products finding the right policy that fits your needs. If you find one that fits your needs better then it's best to wait until your existing policy expires before changing companies to avoid any possible midterm cancellation fees.

Take the time. Report the crime. That's the message to consumers from Insurance Bureau of Canada (IBC).

IBC's goal is to reduce insurance fraud. According to the Ontario Auto Insurance Anti-Fraud Task Force Final Report, auto insurance fraud in Ontario is estimated to cost consumers up to $1.6 billion per year in insurance premiums. These estimated costs do not include additional health-care, emergency services and court costs.

"Consumers can help by learning about the different types of insurance fraud and then reporting any suspicious activity," says Rick Dubin, IBC's vice-president of investigations. "When someone makes a false or exaggerated claim, honest policyholders pay for it. We all have an interest in reducing insurance fraud."

Five common types of insurance fraud are:

- 1 Unscrupulous auto repair shops that intentionally cause additional damage to a vehicle involved in an accident or bill several different insurers for repairing the same prior damage to a vehicle;

- 2 Medical clinics that ask claimants to sign blank accident benefit forms, then bill insurers for services never provided;

- 3 Individuals who privately sell a stolen vehicle to an unsuspecting consumer after changing the vehicle identification number to hide its true identity;

- 4 Collisions that don't seem to make sense, where a driver intentionally causes a collision with an unsuspecting driver and makes it look as if the innocent driver is at fault for the collision;

- 5 Medical clinics that forge the signatures of legitimate medical practitioners and use their names and college registration numbers without their knowledge or consent on accident benefit forms and then bill insurers for services never provided.

Weegar's time with Herd helps heal family wounds

'We've come a long way.' Team's visit to Gatineau more than just about hockey for No. 52

ANDREW RANKIN
andrew.rankin@metronews.ca

For MacKenzie Weegar, returning to Ottawa last week was more than just a homecoming.

The Halifax Mooseheads defenceman had more on his mind than closing out his team's second-round playoff series against the Gatineau Olympiques.

The experience of returning back to his roots served as an epiphany of sorts for a young man who suddenly realized just how far he's come over the past couple of years.

"To see my family, teachers, coaches and friends coming out to support me after everything I've come through, it was emotional. I feel really lucky," Weegar said.

It's just been during Weegar's stint with the Mooseheads that his parents Scott and Louise, who divorced eight years ago, have come together in support of their son.

"Mac in his own way has brought us back together," said Scott.

He holds no hard feelings toward either of his parents, understanding early on that sometimes relationships fall apart and in the end there's no one to blame.

Weegar, who moved in with another family after the divorce, also knows that both his parents did their best, calling him as much as they could, showing up to as many of his Junior A and B games as possible.

Sitting with his parents just hours before Game 4 against Gatineau last Wednesday, Weegar described his mother as the most important person in his life.

"She's always been there for me as a single parent with my sister (Emily)," Weegar said. "She's always been the one to pick me up and get me back standing on my feet again."

Louise simply feels blessed that her son found a way to thrive.

"I think the three of us sitting here and relishing in this moment is pretty surreal," she said. "He's got the best mental game of any player on that ice. I'm pretty proud; very proud."

Scott couldn't agree more.

"You think, Wow, he's worked so hard, he's made a commitment, and there's been lots of travel time and so much practice and preparation on and off the ice."

There have been other believers too, like one of his earlier coaches Mike Dagenais, who put him on a nutrition program and ensured he made the next step in his career.

Semifinal matchup

Huskies up next for Moose

Dominique Ducharme knows his squad will be facing a Rouyn-Noranda Huskies team firing on all cylinders in Saturday's semifinal opener at the Metro Centre.

But the Halifax Mooseheads coach said preparation would remain the same as always for the best-of-seven series.

"We keep moving forward, we continue to work on small details and perfecting our game," said Ducharme. "Our approach doesn't change."

The Huskies finished off the Quebec Remparts at home on Friday night to take the quarter-final series in five games.

Game 2 goes Sunday in Halifax, with the series switching to Rouyn-Noranda for Games 3 and 4 next Tuesday and Thursday.

Tickets for the first two games go on sale Thursday at 10 a.m. METRO aged to heal some old wounds within his family.

"It's about the four of us, and having some fun with his career as opposed to it being a struggle now," said Louise.

That's not something lost on her son.

"I'm proud not just for myself but for my sister too," Weegar said. "We've all come a long way."

Adam rises above Angel at Augusta

Golf. Aussie Scott makes up for British Open meltdown with steely Masters win over Cabrera in sudden death

Adam Scott became the first Australian to win the Masters, beating Angel Cabrera on the second hole of a playoff on a soggy Sunday at Augusta National.

The Masters went to a sudden-death playoff for the second year in a row when Scott and Cabrera made matching birdies on the 72nd hole.

They both made par on the first extra hole, returning to No. 18, before Scott rolled in a 12-footer for birdie to win it.

Scott pumped his fists in the air, screaming toward the grey, darkening sky, and embraced caddie Steve Williams, who was on the bag for 13 of Tiger Woods' 14 major titles.

For Scott, this is the first, making up for his major meltdown at last year's British Open, where he bogeyed the last four holes to lose by a stroke to Ernie Els.

"I found my way today," Scott said.

The Aussie made a 20-foot putt at 18 and celebrated with Williams as if it were over. Cabrera, in the final group, watched from the fairway knowing he had to hit a brilliant shot. He did.

Tiger tails off

Tiger Woods came up short again. He hasn't won the Masters since 2005, or any major since 2008.

Cabrera's ball pulled up three feet from the cup for an easy birdie that sent the two players to the playoff tied at 9-under 279.

Crawford outduels Elliot as Hawks stop Blues

Corey Crawford came away with the shutout in this one, not Brian Elliott.

Chicago's goalie stopped 30 shots and Bryan Bickell and Marian Hossa scored to lead the Blackhawks to a 2-0 win over the St. Louis Blues on Sunday, ending Elliott's bid for a fourth straight shutout.

Elliott had shut out the Red Wings, Predators and Wild in succession on the road for a franchise record scoreless run of 189 minutes and 23 seconds. His overall shutout string ended at 214 minutes in the second period.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

The Sun, Venus and Mars all leave your sign over the coming week, suggesting a major change of emphasis in your life events. Put simply: you've had your fun, now you must find ways to pay for it.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

No matter how much fun you are having at the moment the real fun has hardly begun.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

Luck will come your way when you most need it this week, so don't worry about how you are going to pay your way because the universe will provide. You've still got to make some effort though.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Your likes and dislikes will be clear for all to see over the next few days. Don't try to hide them

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

You need to transform the working pattern of your life and the planets will help you in a big way over the next seven days. You don't have to do much yourself – just expect opportunities and act quickly when they arrive.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

There will be several opportunities to indulge your desires this coming week, and you should take advantage of each and every one of them. Life is supposed to be fun, so make having a good time your top priority.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

This could be and should be a fortunate time for you but you must also be careful. There is a tendency to take too much for granted and maybe overextend yourself financially. Remember your Libra sense of balance.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Spend more time with partners and loved ones and relatives. You are so plugged into life and it's many possibilities that you sometimes neglect those who really count. Make it up to them – put them first today.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

You must not, repeat not, push yourself beyond your limits over the next few days.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

There are various times when it all comes together and this is one of them. Over the next few days you will find that your energy peaks and you have more enthusiasm for life in general – and creativity in particular.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

The cosmic emphasis is about to shift to domestic matters but there is still time to do something special in the world.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

Get moving quickly today because once you get going you won't want to stop and you will accomplish much more than you expected.
